RAJASTHAN 2026

Figures as of 21 February 2026, when the final roll was published.

Overview

1. Rajasthan's draft roll left off 41.8 lakh names, 7.7 of every 100 electors on the roll before the revision.

2. After the draft 12.9 lakh were added and 2.4 lakh more deleted, so 44.3 lakh had been left off or deleted by the time of the final roll. The final roll was 10.5 lakh larger than the draft, which is at most 25.1% of what was left off.

3. The District Election Officers' own figures, as two newspapers printed them for 22 districts, put Jodhpur highest, with 11.2 of every 100 names left off the draft, and Barmer lowest, with 4.0.

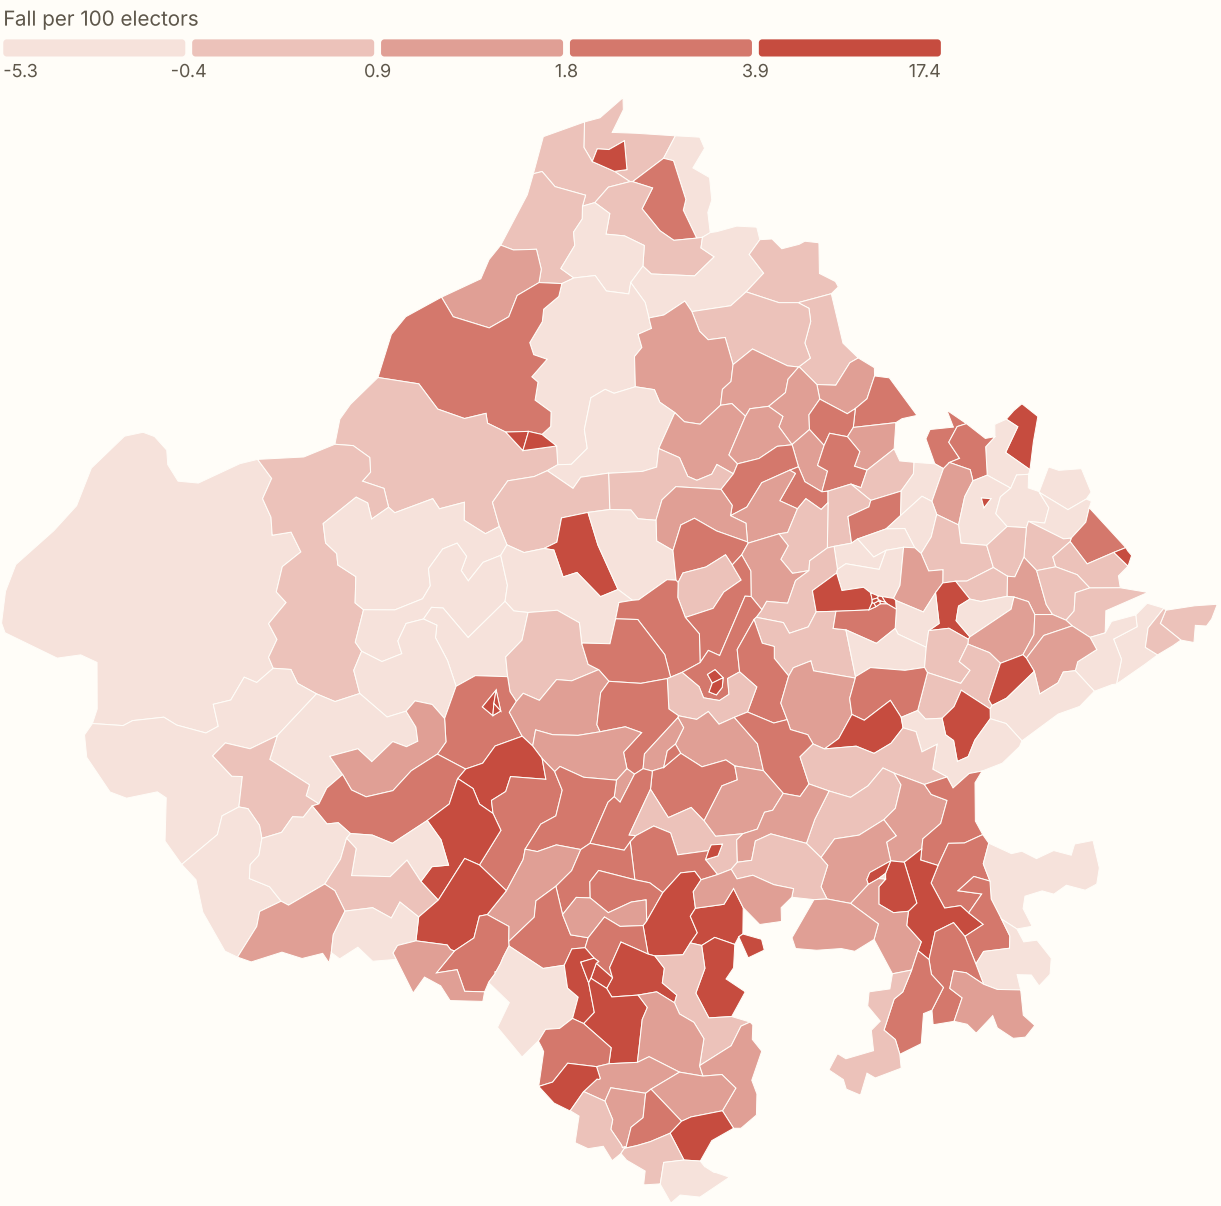

4. From the 2023 election to the final roll, the roll fell most in Salumber (5.7 per 100) and grew in Balotara, Deeg, Dholpur, Jaisalmer, Phalodi and Barmer.

5. Women's share of the roll fell in 165 of 200 constituencies, from 48.0% in 2023 to 47.7%, and women were 55.4% of the names deleted after the draft.

6. In 32 of the 200 constituencies the roll fell by more than the 2023 winning margin.

Find a constituency or district

An assembly constituency is the area that elects one member of the state assembly. Rajasthan has 200 of them. Type a constituency's name or number, or a district, and its figures appear below with a link you can send.

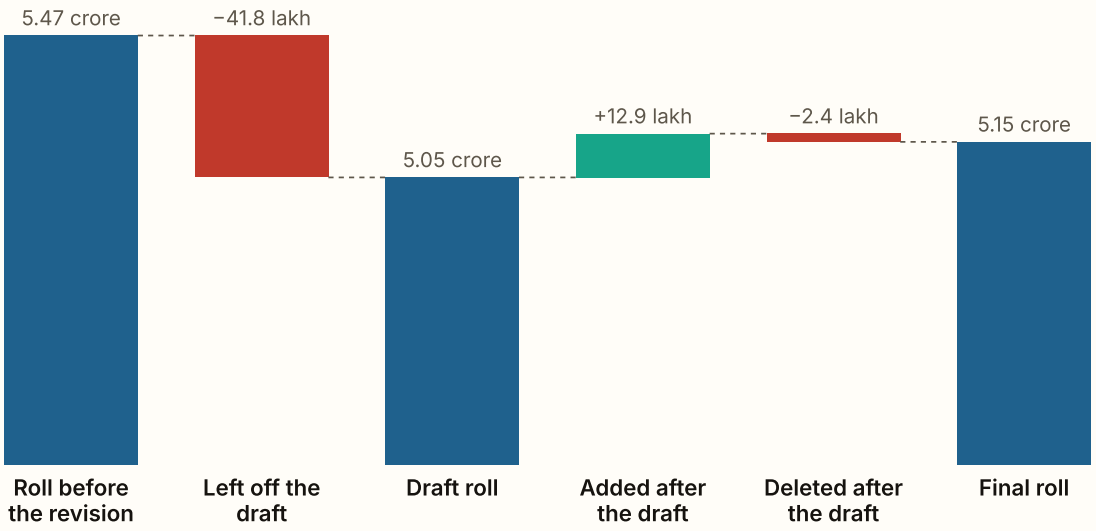

Each constituency is shaded by the change in its roll of general electors, which is the roll without service voters, from the 2023 election to the final roll of March 2026. The change is counted for every 100 electors on the 2023 roll. The darkest fell most, and the lightest fell least or grew. Tap a constituency for its figures. Boundaries drawn from DataMeet's assembly constituency map (CC BY 2.5 India).

The roll, step by step

The roll before the revision is the list of electors when the revision began. The draft roll is the list published after the enumeration forms came back, and a name whose form did not come back was left off it. Names were then added and deleted on claims and objections, and the result is the final roll. These are the figures the Chief Electoral Officer (CEO), who keeps the state's rolls for the Election Commission, published for the 199 constituencies revised together. Anta was revised later, after its bye-election, and is outside them. The bars start above zero so that the changes can be seen.

> The draft roll left off 41.8 lakh names, 7.7 of every 100 electors. After the draft, 12.9 lakh were added and 2.4 lakh more deleted, so 44.3 lakh had been left off or deleted by the time of the final roll. The final roll was 10.5 lakh larger than the draft, 25.1% of what the draft left off. That rise counts new voters too, so it is the most that can have been put back.

Rajasthan's dates, as they were set and as they were moved, are drawn beside every other state's on How the revision was run.

The reasons

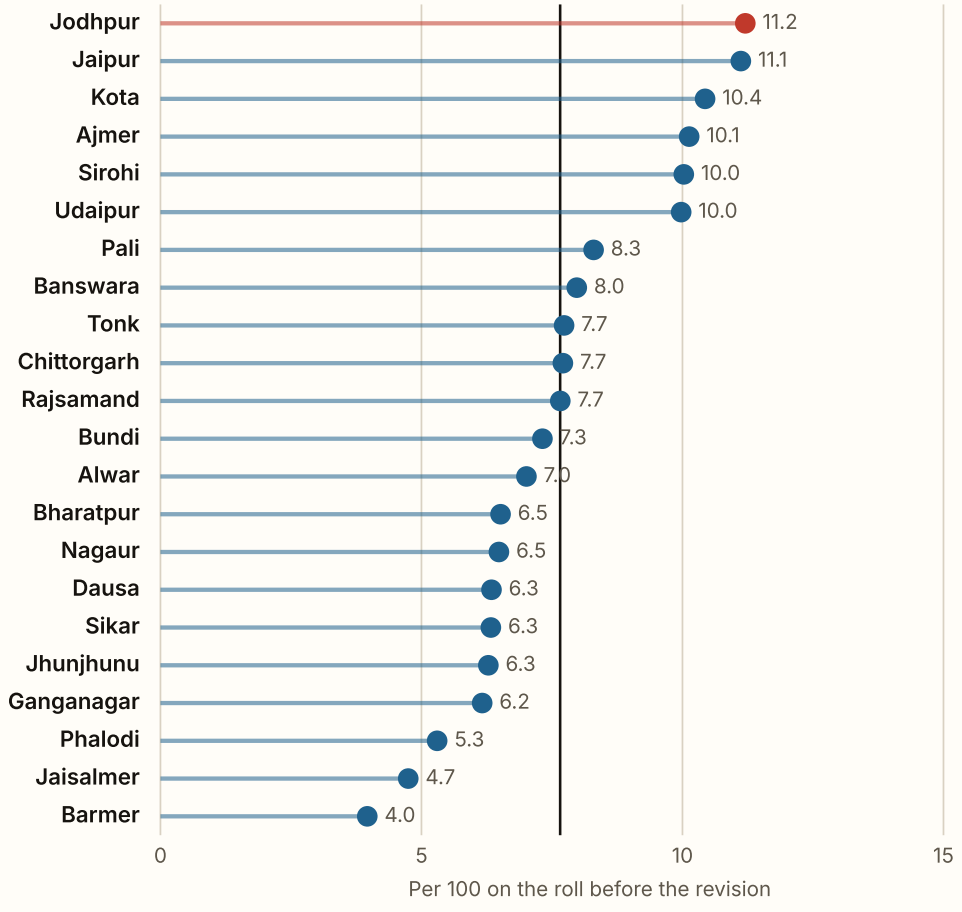

Each name left off the draft carries one of three reasons. The reasons were published for the state only, in lakh (one lakh is 100,000) and rounded. A reason is what the officer wrote down, and nobody checked it.

70.8% were entered as shifted or absent, and 20.9% as dead. The three reasons add up to 41.79 lakh, against 41.8 lakh left off. They differ because each reason was published rounded.

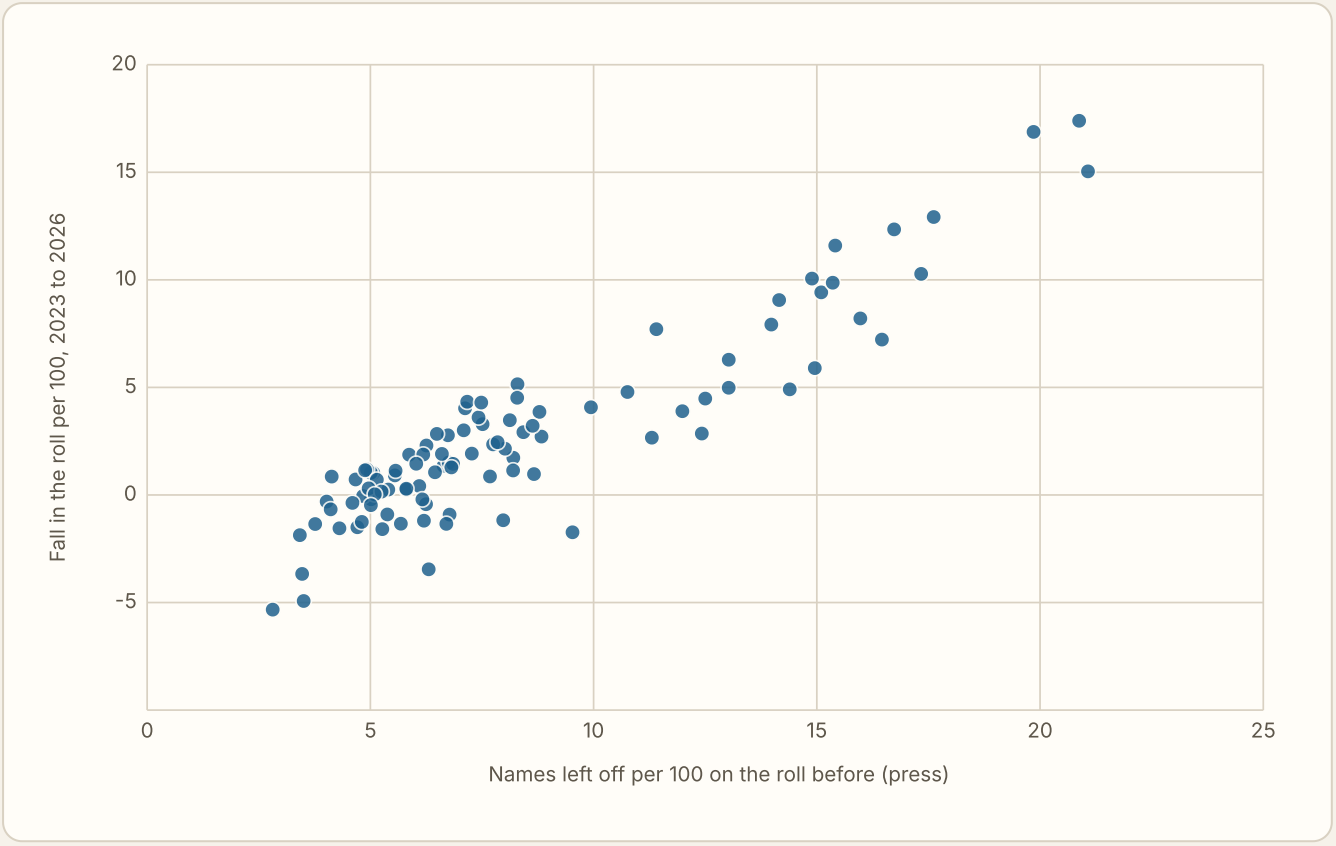

Names left off, district by district, as the press printed them

On 16 December 2025 each District Election Officer gave parties and reporters the district's figures for the draft. They were the roll on 27 October 2025, the forms that came back, the names left off and the five reasons. The Chief Electoral Officer has published none of these tables. Dainik Bhaskar and Amar Ujala printed them for 22 of the 41 districts and 110 of the 199 constituencies, and those are the figures below. They are press figures and cover only part of the state, so they are kept apart from the Chief Electoral Officer's own counts on the rest of this page. Each row adds up within itself except for a few printed slips, which are listed on the method page.

In the 22 districts the press printed, 27.8 lakh names were left off, 66.4% of the state's 41.8 lakh. Jodhpur lost the most, 11.2 of every 100 on its roll, then Jaipur (11.1) and Kota (10.4). Barmer lost the fewest, 4.0. The line marks the state's 7.7. In the 20 districts that gave the five reasons, 59.6% of the names were entered as shifted for good, 21.3% as dead, 11.4% as absent and 7.1% as enrolled at more than one place. A reason is what the officer wrote down, and nobody checked it.

Each dot is one of the constituencies with a printed roll before the revision. Its place across is the names left off per 100 on that roll, from the press tables. Its height is the change in its roll from the 2023 election to the final roll, from the Election Commission's and the Chief Electoral Officer's own tables, which is the measure the rest of this page uses. Hover or tap a dot for its name.

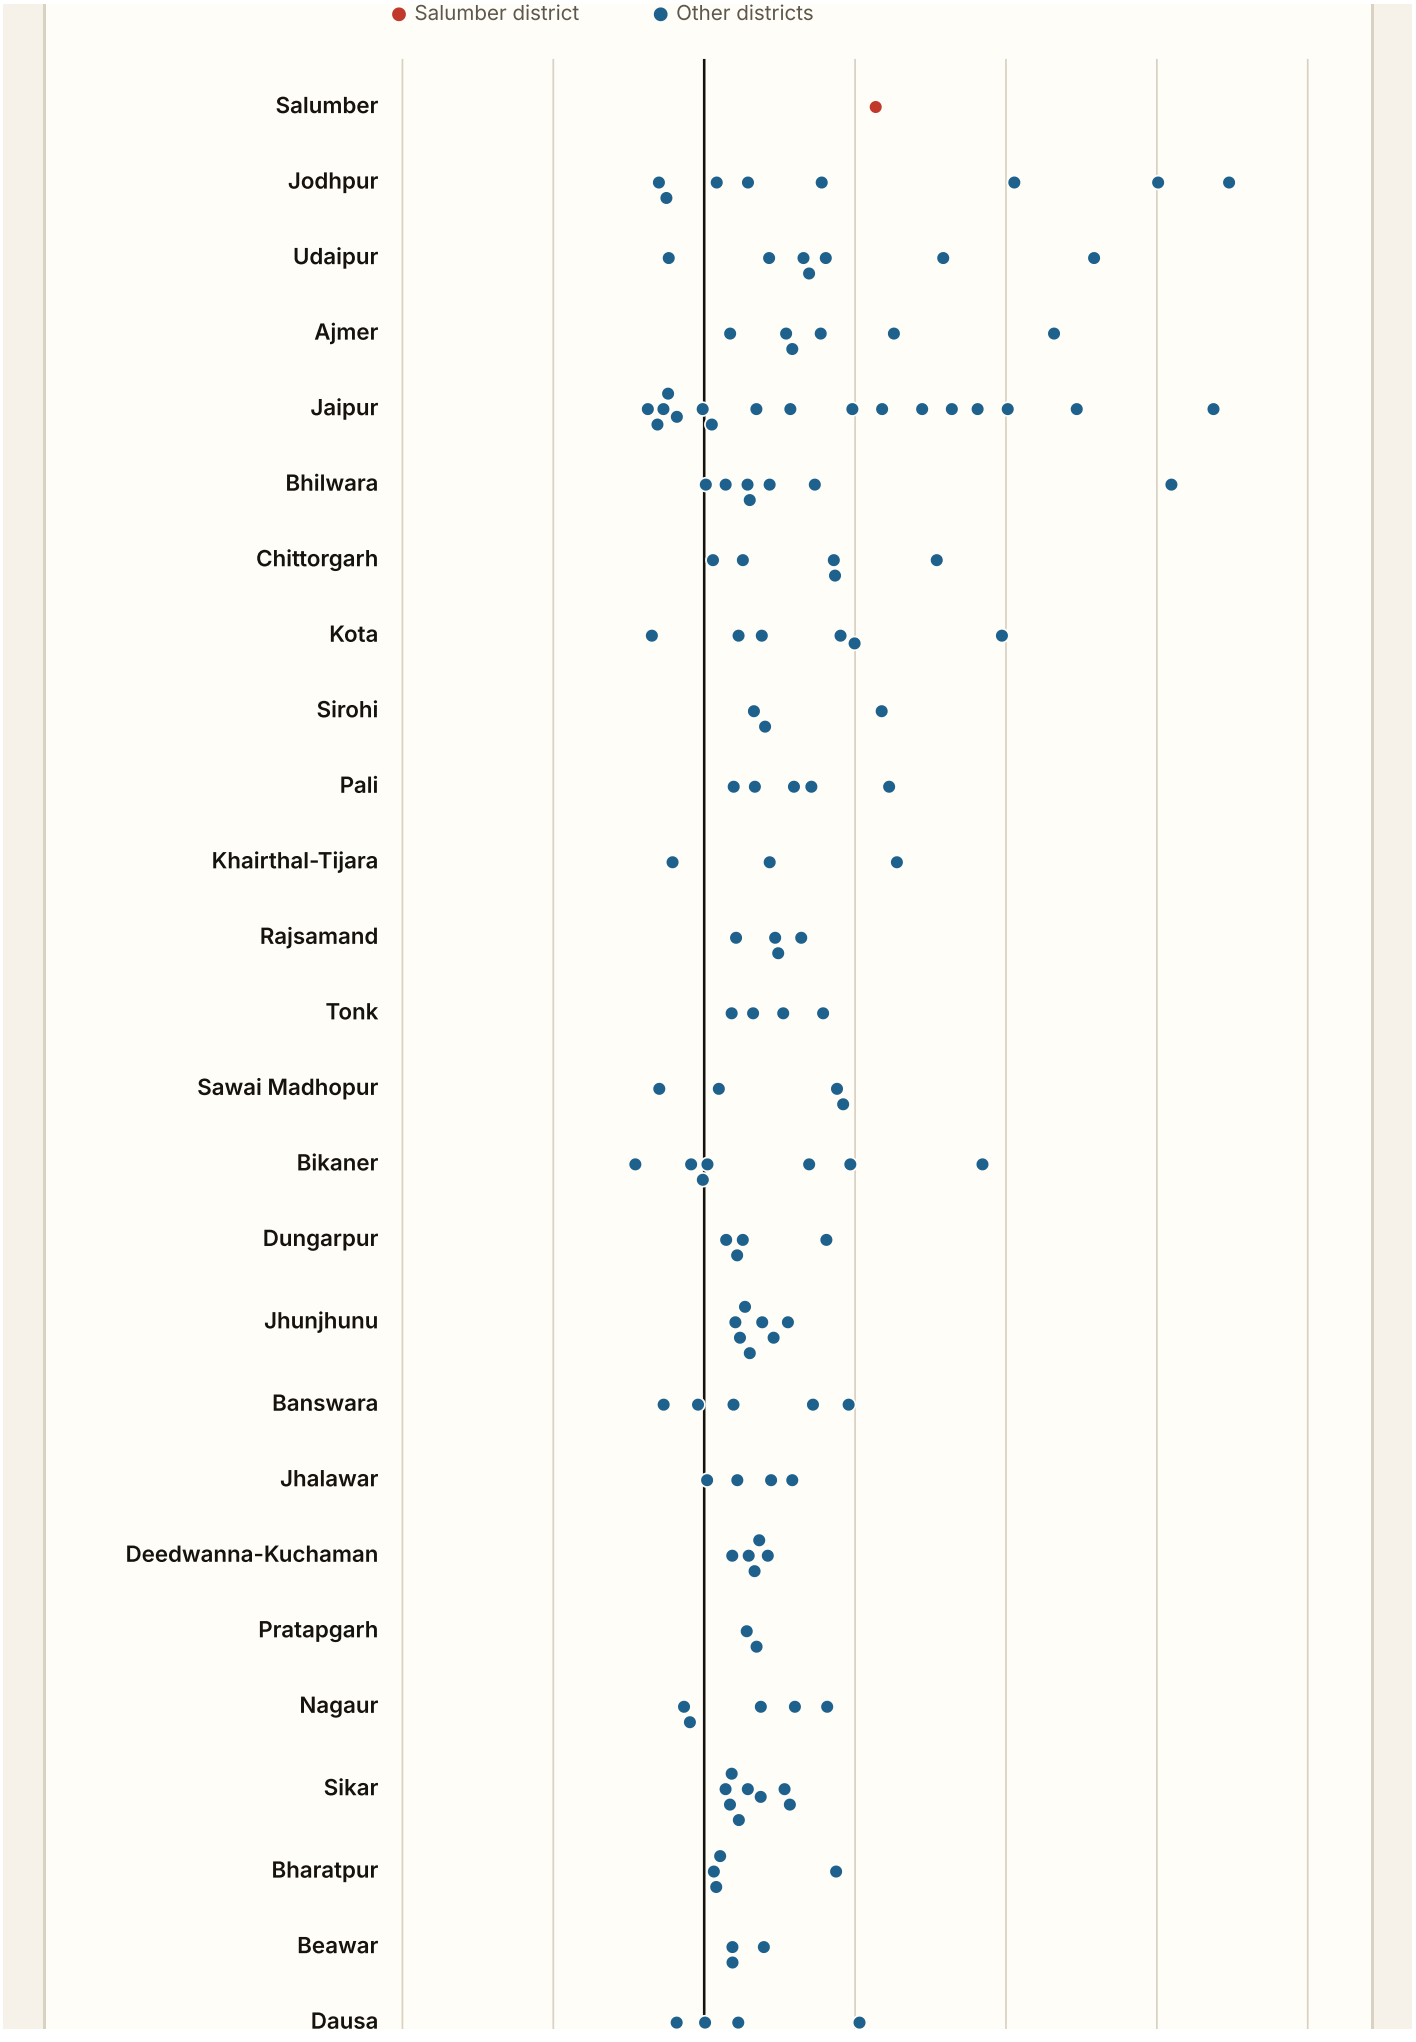

Of the 99 constituencies with a printed roll, Sardarpura lost the most, 21.1 of every 100 names, and Gudamalani the fewest, 2.8. The constituencies that lost more names at the draft are mostly the ones whose roll fell more from 2023 to 2026 (rank correlation 0.85, and 0.88 across the 22 districts). So the change in the roll used on the rest of this page ranks places much as the names left off would, even though it is a smaller count that also takes in new voters. In 68 of the 110 constituencies, more names were left off the draft than the 2023 winner's margin, and 51 at the seat's 2023 turnout. That means the names left > off were enough to decide those seats. It says nothing about whether they would have.

▶ THE 110 CONSTITUENCIES IN THE PRESS TABLES

Per 100 electors, by district

The Chief Electoral Officer has published no count of the names left off below the state. The rolls themselves are published by constituency, so this chart compares two of them. Each dot is one constituency's change in its roll of general electors, from the roll the 2023 election was held on to the final roll of 12 March 2026, grouped by district. Counting per 100 electors on the 2023 roll puts large and small constituencies on one scale. A fall of 5 per 100 means the roll is a twentieth smaller. The change takes in more than two years of new voters, deaths and moves as well as the revision, so it is a different count from the names left off. Below zero, the roll grew. From the 2023 election to the final roll, the roll of general electors fell by 10.6 lakh, 2.0 per 100. It fell most in Salumber (5.7 per 100), Jodhpur and Udaipur, and grew in 6 districts, Balotara, Deeg, Dholpur, Jaisalmer, Phalodi and Barmer. Across the 200 constituencies it runs from a rise of 5.3 per 100 in Gudamalani to a fall of 17.4 in Jodhpur, and 49 constituencies grew. The change takes in more than two years of new voters, deaths and moves as well as the revision.

Women

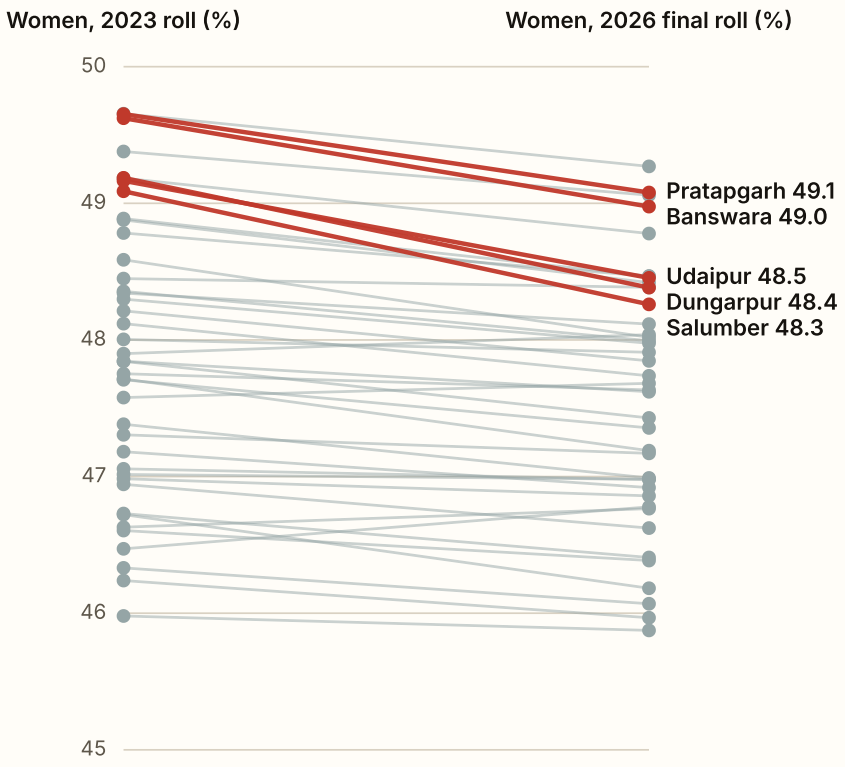

Each dot is a constituency. Its place across is women's share of its 2023 roll, and its height is women's share of its final roll in 2026. A dot below the dashed line is a constituency where women are now a smaller share of the roll than they were. Hover or tap a dot for its name.

Women were 47.7% of the final roll, against 48.0% of the 2023 roll, and their share fell in 165 of the 200 constituencies. Of the names deleted after the draft, women were 55.4%, and of those added 51.3%. No split by sex of the names left off has been published for the state. One district gave one. In Sirohi, by the District Election Officer's figures as Amar Ujala printed them, women were 55.7% of the 85,596 names left off, against 48.3% of the roll before the revision.

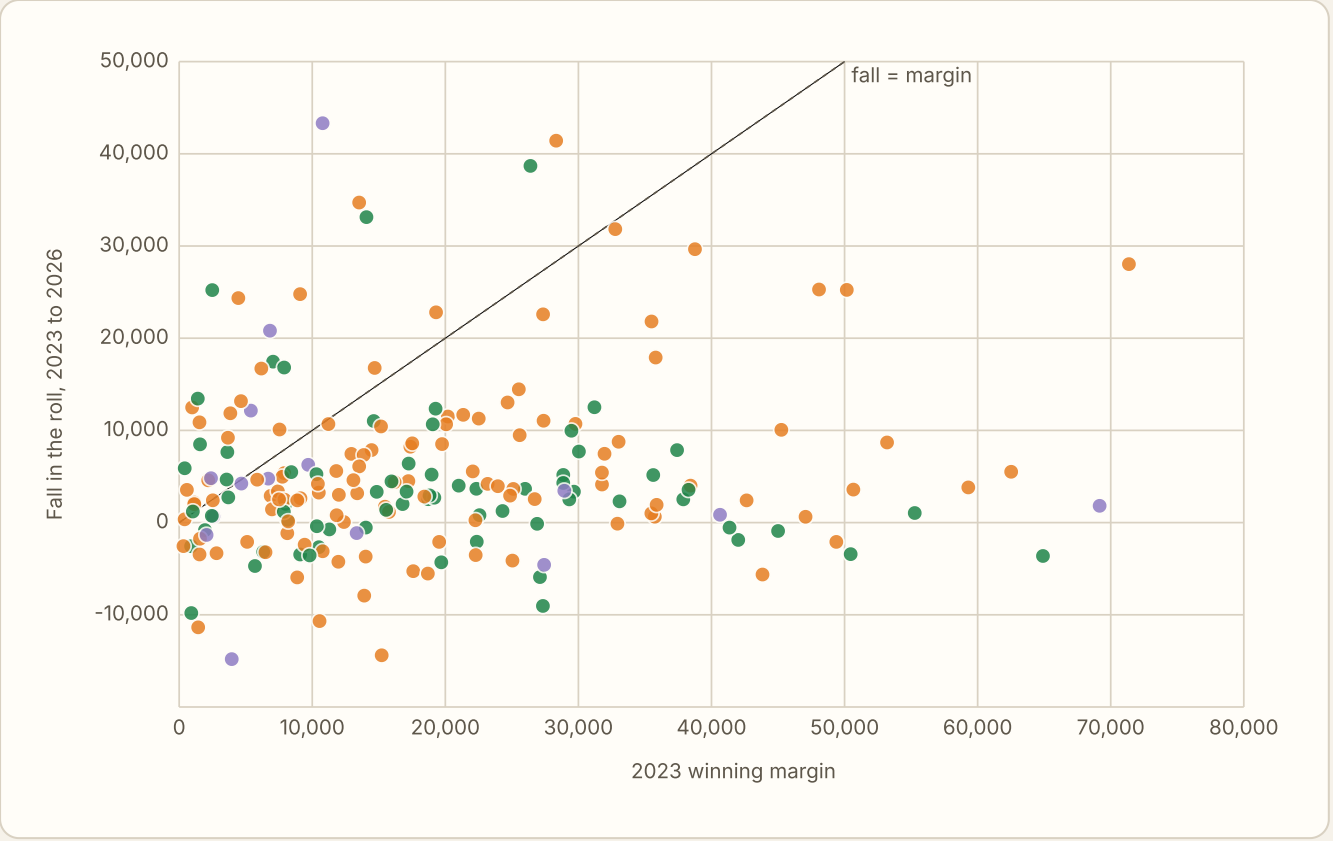

The same by district. Each line joins a district's share of women on the 2023 roll to its share on the final roll. The districts where it fell most are named and drawn in red.

Women's share fell most in Salumber, by 0.83 points, from 49.1% to 48.3%. Dungarpur, Udaipur, Banswara and Pratapgarh come next. It rose in 4 of the 41 districts.

Against the 2023 margins

The winning margin is the winner's votes less the runner-up's. Each dot is a constituency. Its place across is the margin its 2023 winner won by, and its height is the fall in its roll from 2023 to the final roll. Above the dashed line, the roll fell by more than the margin. That means the change was large enough to decide the seat, and it says nothing about whether it would have. Below zero, the roll grew.

In 32 of the 200 constituencies the roll fell by more than the 2023 winning margin. Not everyone on a roll votes, so scaled down by each seat's 2023 turnout it is 27. The roll fell by 2.3 per 100 in the BJP's 115 seats and 1.5 in the Congress's 70. Against their own districts the two are within half a point of zero (0.1 and -0.3). So most of the difference comes from where each party's seats are. Orange dots are BJP seats, green Congress and purple the rest.

Questions about this page

How many names were left off the draft in Rajasthan?

Rajasthan's draft roll left off 41.8 lakh names, 7.7 of every 100 electors on the roll before the revision. The draft roll is the list published once the enumeration forms were collected, and a name whose form did not come back was left off it. 70.8% were entered as shifted or absent, 20.9% as dead and the rest as enrolled at more than one place. A reason is what the officer wrote down, and nobody checked it.

Were the names put back?

After the draft 12.9 lakh were added and 2.4 lakh more deleted, so 44.3 lakh had been left off or deleted by the time of the final roll. The final roll was 10.5 lakh larger than the draft, which is at most 25.1% of what was left off. The rise counts new voters as well as names put back, so it cannot show how many of those left off returned.

Why do the district and constituency figures measure the change in the roll?

The Chief Electoral Officer, who keeps the state's rolls, published the names left off only as a state total. Below the state the only source is the lists of individual electors, which this site does not open. So the pages compare the roll of the 2023 election with the final SIR roll of March 2026, constituency by constituency. That change takes in more than two years of new voters, deaths and moves as well as the revision. For the state it is a fall of 10.6 lakh, against 41.8 lakh left off the draft.

Are there any counts of the names left off below the state?

Only in the press. On the day the draft was published, each District Election Officer gave the district's figures to parties and reporters, and Dainik Bhaskar and Amar Ujala printed them for 22 of the 41 districts and 110 of the 199 constituencies. Those cover 27.8 lakh of the 41.8 lakh names left off. The District Election Officers' own figures, as two newspapers printed them for 22 districts, put Jodhpur highest, with 11.2 of every 100 names left off the draft, and Barmer lowest, with 4.0. In 68 of the 110 constituencies they cover, more names were left off than the 2023 winning margin. They rank places much as the change in the roll does (rank correlation 0.85 across constituencies).

Where did the roll fall most?

From the 2023 election to the final roll, the roll fell most in Salumber (5.7 per 100) and grew in Balotara, Deeg, Dholpur, Jaisalmer, Phalodi and Barmer. Across the constituencies it runs from a fall of 17.4 per 100 in Jodhpur to a rise of 5.3 in Gudamalani.

Were more women than men left off or deleted?

Women's share of the roll fell in 165 of 200 constituencies, from 48.0% in 2023 to 47.7%, and women were 55.4% of the names deleted after the draft. No split by sex of the names left off the draft has been published for the state. In Sirohi, the one district whose officer gave one, women were 55.7% of the names left off against 48.3% of the roll before, by the officer's figures as Amar Ujala printed them.

Could the change in the roll have changed the 2023 result?

In 32 of the 200 constituencies the roll fell by more than the 2023 winning margin. The winning margin is the winner's votes less the runner-up's. The revision came after that election, so this measures how large the change is against the votes that decide a seat. Larger than the margin means large enough to decide a seat, and it says nothing about whether it would have. Nobody can know how anyone missing from the roll would have voted.

Did the roll fall more in one party's seats?

The roll fell by 2.3 per 100 in the BJP's 115 seats and 1.5 in the Congress's 70. Set against the change in their own districts, the two are 0.1 and -0.3. So most of the difference comes from where each party's seats are.

Figures as of 21 February 2026, when the final roll was published.

Method

1 Rajasthan's draft roll left off 41.8 lakh names, 7.7 of every 100 electors on the roll before the revision.

2 Below the state, the pages compare the roll of the 2023 election with the final SIR roll, because the Chief Electoral Officer published no count of the names left off by district or constituency. The District Election Officers' counts for 22 districts are used where two newspapers printed them, and are marked as press.

What is counted

The state figures

Three rolls matter here. The roll before the revision (5,46,56,215) is the list when the revision began. The draft roll is the list published once the enumeration forms were collected, and it leaves off anyone whose form did not come back. The final roll is the draft after the names added and deleted on claims and objections. The roll before, the forms collected and the three reasons are from the press note of 16 December 2025 by the Chief Electoral Officer (CEO), who keeps the state's rolls. It gives the reasons only in lakh (one lakh is 100,000), rounded. The draft roll, the names added and deleted after it and the final roll, by sex, are from the CEO's fact sheet of 21 February 2026. All of them cover the 199 constituencies revised together. Anta was revised later, after its bye-election of November 2025, and is outside them. The names left off the draft, 41,84,891, are the roll before less the draft roll. No document prints that number. The three rounded reasons add up to 41.79 lakh.

Why the change in the roll below the state

The CEO has published no table of the names left off by assembly constituency (AC) or district. The only primary source below the state is the lists of individual electors, which this site does not open. So the constituency and district pages compare two published rolls of general electors. One is the roll the 2023 assembly election was held on, from the Election Commission's statistical report (AC-wise number of electors). The other is the final SIR roll of 12 March 2026, from the CEO's district and constituency table. General electors are everyone on the roll except service voters, who are left out of both because they cluster in a few districts and would distort the change there. The change takes in more than two years of new voters, deaths and moves as well as the revision, so it is never called the names left off. For the state it is a fall of 10,56,665, against 41,84,891 left off the draft.

Women

The 2026 table counts 565 third-gender electors among women, statewide, with no split by constituency. To compare like with like, the 2023 third-gender electors are added to women too. No split by sex of the names left off the draft has been published for the state. Sirohi's District Election Officer gave the roll before and the draft by sex, and Amar Ujala printed both on 17 December 2025. Each adds up to the district's total, and the names left off by sex are the difference between them.

The 2023 result

Winner, runner-up and winning margin (the winner's votes less the runner-up's) for every seat are from the Election Commission's statistical report for the 2023 election, including Karanpur, whose poll was held in January 2024. Seats that changed hands at later bye-elections, Anta among them, are not reflected.

How the figures add up

The 2023 general electors add up to the Election Commission's total, and the 2026 constituencies to the fact sheet's final roll. The draft plus additions less deletions equals the final roll. Every margin equals the winner's votes less the runner-up's.

Names left off, as the press printed them

Where the figures come from

On 16 December 2025, the day the draft was published, each District Election Officer briefed parties and reporters with the district's roll on 27 October 2025, the enumeration forms received, the forms not received (the names left off) and their five reasons: dead, shifted for good, absent, enrolled at more than one place and other. Dainik Bhaskar's district editions printed these as tables, most with a row for each constituency, and Amar Ujala printed Bundi's and Sirohi's. The officers' own sheets were not found, and the CEO's site carries no such table. So the figures are press figures. They cover 22 of the 41 districts, 27,77,424 (66.4%) of the names left off in the state, and 110 of the 199 constituencies. The rest of the districts were not found in either paper.

Checks

In every district, the roll before less the names left off equals the draft, and the five reasons add up to the names left off, with four exceptions in the printed district rows. Kota's printed roll before and draft are each off by a round amount from the sum of its constituencies, which agree with each other. The reasons in Alwar, Ajmer and Jaisalmer miss the total by 20, 54 and 30. Where a district printed a row for each constituency, the rows add up to the district row in every column, except in Alwar, Ajmer, Pali, Jaisalmer and Kota, where the printed figures disagree with the district row. 99 of the 110 constituency rows add up within themselves. The rest are kept as printed. In Jhunjhunu four rows are each off by a round thousand that cancels across the district. Kota South's printed roll before repeats Kota North's, and is replaced by its draft plus its names left off. Ganganagar's printed table swaps the names left off and the draft, and its own text puts them right. Across the 22 districts and the constituencies, the names left off rank places much as the change in the roll from 2023 to 2026 does, which the overview shows.

What is left out

Two papers reported an exact split of the state's reasons, and they disagree with each other and with the CEO's rounded figures, so the state reasons stay the CEO's. Counts of electors with no mapping to the 2002 roll were printed for Jaipur's and Jodhpur's constituencies only, and are in the download.

Against the district

Some districts' rolls shrank far more than others, and the parties did not win evenly across districts. A party that won many seats in a district whose roll fell a lot would then show a large fall in its seats, and the cause would be the district. So each seat's change per 100 electors is also set against its own district's, and those differences are averaged over each party's seats.

What these tables cannot show

- How many names were left off in the 19 districts and 89 constituencies the press did not print, and the CEO's own count anywhere below the state.
- How many of those left off were put back.
- Whether each exclusion or deletion was right, or how anyone missing from the roll would have voted.

Questions about this page

Why do the district and constituency figures measure the change in the roll?

The Chief Electoral Officer, who keeps the state's rolls, published the names left off only as a state total. Below the state the only source is the lists of individual electors, which this site does not open. So the pages compare the roll of the 2023 election with the final SIR roll of March 2026, constituency by constituency. That change takes in
